LEADING OPPONENTS OF REVISION JOIN FORCES IN ATTACK

Against Recommendations of Gov. Earle's Revision Advisory Committee

TAYLOR AND BOAK

Assert the Recommendations Would Mean "Huge Burden of New Taxes"

By International News Service

HARRISBURG, Sept. 14.—Two leading opponents of constitutional revision today joined in attacking the recommendations of Governor George H. Earle's revision advisory committee as "added reason" why the voters should reject the proposal to call a constitutional convention at the polls next Tuesday.

Terming the recommendations "deceptive suggestions" not binding to the convention, M. Harvey Taylor, Republican state chairman, branded the proposed changes outlined by the Governor's committee as "not what they seemed to be on the surface."

J. A. Boak, Master of the State Grange, declared that after reading the recommendations he was "more than ever convinced" revision is undesirable at this time.

"If the committee's proposals were all embodied in a new constitution we would be constantly in peril of unwise legislation being rushed through the Legislature without opportunity for protest," he said.

Both Boak and Taylor asserted the recommendations, in their opinion, would mean "huge burdens of new taxes" instead of equalization or reduction in taxes. Taylor also declared his belief that the recommendations for an increased borrowing power would open the way "under another cleverly worded clause for wholesale borrowing for emergency purposes."

"An emergency would be any time a Governor might decide to go on a spending spree," he said.

Mussolini To Proceed

Rome, Italy, Sept. 14.—Acting with the full realization the world has lined up against him, Premier Benito Mussolini in his characteristic forceful way, today announced in clear terms he will go ahead with his East African plans, opposition of other powers notwithstanding. Mussolini announced the strengthening of Italian forces at Libya, an Italian colony bordering on Egypt near the scene of the projected Italo-Ethiopian war.

Join With Great Britain

Geneva, Sept. 14.—Completing a virtual world front opposing the Italian war-like plans in East Africa, Soviet Russia and a half dozen smaller European nations today followed the lead of Great Britain and France in pledging themselves to full support of the League's peace machinery. In addition to Russia, whose stand was announced by Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff; Portugal, Yugo-Slavia, Czechoslovakia, Roumania, Greece, Turkey and Bulgaria all stepped into line with pledges of full support of whatever steps the League may take against Premier Benito Mussolini if he should become the aggressor against Ethiopia.

NOTICE TO SIXTH WARD VOTERS

The polling place of the sixth ward, second precinct, has been changed from Karp's store on Hayes street, to Karp's store at 1834 Farragut avenue.

Attention! Third Ward Voters

The polling place in the third ward, Bristol borough, has been changed from Mohican Hall, Otter street, to the show-room adjoining the Wright Service Garage, 508 Bath street.

S! O! S!

Devices for spending and more spending; new taxes and more taxes; unlimited borrowing; loans to meet deficits; more loans for current expenses and then loans for capital expenditure; home rule vanquished and gubernatorial control of the legislature are the gist of a few of the malignantly partisan recommendations made by the Governor's advisory committee—and endorsed by Governor Earle—for inclusion in his proposed revision of our safe and sane State constitution.

One of the first recommendations of Governor Earle's advisory committee is without a doubt the most astounding of them all for it would deprive the people of their inalienable right to vote either for or against an amendment to their constitution, before a proposed amendment could be adopted. The committee takes this power away from the people and gives the legislature the right to amend the constitution. And, as if mindful of providing a control of this proposed plundering of the people, the advisory committee, almost in the same voice, recommends the extension of the power of the Governor over the legislature by suggesting the inclusion in a revised constitution of ways and means for "closer co-operation between the Governor and the legislature." Surely the Governor's committee is not catering to the "whimsies" that have so far characterized the Harrisburg administration?

In spite of the propaganda advocated by Governor Earle and his clique of revisionists that the present constitution should be changed if for no other reason than to bring about a reduction in real estate taxes, his committee made no recommendations on the question of real estate taxes. As a matter of fact none of the recommendations of the committee suggest any real economies along that line. Despite the fact that the people of Pennsylvania want to elect their own judges, a proposition was submitted giving the legislative power to provide for the appointment to judicial vacancies by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. This plan, if adopted by the revisionists, would attempt to garb the Supreme Court Chief Justice of Pennsylvania in the mantle of a political boss. This matter was set aside for further consideration in another series of recommendations to be filed by the committee, should the people fail to vote down on election day, September 17th, the holding of a constitutional convention.

Revisionists have prated much about the necessity of a new constitution to provide means for a reduction in the cost of government. Apparently the Governor's committee had that thought in mind when recommending the abolition of the elective offices of Secretary of Internal Affairs and State Treasurer. But others see in this proposal only a sop held out to beguile the votes of those who are demanding a decided cut in the cost of government, hence lower taxes. Those well versed with the situation in Harrisburg saw at a glance that the proposed abolition of those offices was a daring political gesture having nothing whatever to do with government economies. Governor Earle wants to get complete control of these two offices because of the vast patronage they carry. The State Treasurer's office is now manned with Republicans and the Secretary of Internal Affairs office, not of the same Democratic faction as Governor Earle, is hard to handle in the appointment line. Besides we have an election for State Treasurer next year and the Democrats are seeking this change in the constitution undoubtedly with thought of gaining control of this office by default. The conclusion being the Democrats are afraid to test it out at the polls, but would rather spend of the people's money to the extent of $650,000—the cost to hold a constitutional convention—to get it.

That centralization of power and the scrapping of home rule is a foregone conclusion, if the Governor Earle revisionists win at the polls on election day next week, is shown by the recommendation of the advisory committee providing that "wide powers be given the legislature for classifying and reorganizing local government" and to reduce the constitutional number of county officers.

In these days of unrest and grave uncertainties changes in the constitution should not be contemplated. Calmer times, cooler heads and much less political greed are needed, when it becomes necessary to make constitutional changes, in order to bring the most good to the greatest number of our people. Ours is a good constitution as it is. So let it stand by voting NO on election day against holding a Constitutional Convention.

COMMUNITY FORUM FORMED AT DOYLESTOWN

To Meet Demand for Lectures On Serious Subjects

ADOPT A PROGRAM

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 14.—To meet a demand for lectures and discussions of a broad field of serious subjects in which the public is interested, the "Doylestown Community Forum" was created last night at a meeting of a general committee selected for that purpose.

The new organization partly replaces the former University Extension course which was successfully maintained in this borough for fifteen or eighteen consecutive years, but which was disbanded several years ago.

Instead of being sponsored by any particular club or organization of the town, the Forum is made representative of the activities and organizations of the community generally. A large committee was formed, its members being drawn from a large number of community organizations and activities. This committee, after holding several meetings, determined upon a definite program for the 1935-'36 season.

FEATURES DISTORTED

By International News Service
DOWNINGTOWN, Sept. 14.—The father of Evelyn Hoey, the girl with the honey-colored hair and golden voice, burst into tears and almost collapsed as he viewed her drawn features in the chapel of an undertaking establishment here, early today.

"Oh, my God!" cried gray-haired Henry J. Hoey, St. Louis drug chemist, as he bent over the body of his once beautiful child in the dim light.

WHY BUY TROUBLE

The immediate cost of holding a constitutional convention would approximate $650,000. The future cost is incalculable. Revision would engulf the State with overwhelming debt and cause taxes to soar to incredible heights.

COURT UPHOLDS THE REGISTRATION ASSESSOR'S ACTION

Winder Vanartsdalen, Lower Southampton, Acted Legally

COURT'S OPINION

Official Refused to Register Voter Without Proof

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 14.—In the matter of the mandamus proceeding of Armondo Mazzone vs. J. Winder Vanartsdalen, Registration Assessor of Lower Southampton township, the Court handed down its opinion yesterday as follows:

"This was a mandamus proceeding brought against Vanartsdalen, Registration Assessor, to compel him to register the plaintiff as a Democratic voter in accordance with the registration certificate filled out and signed by the plaintiff, Mazzone. The evidence showed that a Mr. Alfred R. Clees, Democratic Committeeman, had secured Mr. Mazzone's signature to a certificate requesting that he be registered as a Democratic voter, the certificate being witnessed by Mr. Clees and another man who went with him.

"There was no witness authorization on the certificate directing Mr. Clees to file it with the Registration Assessor and to have the enrollment made. His authorization was merely by word of mouth. Mr. Clees took the certificate of the same kind and laid them before the Registration Assessor without any statement or proof that they were genuine or that he had been appointed their agent to file the certificates for the voters.

"The Assessor did not register these voters in accordance with the certificates, but wrote to Mr. Clees, the agent, that he had no authority under the law to register them unless the voters presented the certificates themselves. Mr. Clees received the letter on the last day for registration.

"At the close of the plaintiff's testimony the defendant Assessor, by his attorney, Mark Thatcher, Esq., stated to the Court that he was now satisfied of the genuineness of the plaintiff's signature to the certificate and of Mr. Clees' authority as agent for Mr. Mazzone to file it and that he was now willing to register him in accordance with the certificate.

"The Court, with President Judge Keller and Judge Boyer sitting, held that where a voter does not personally file his certificate of registration with the Assessor, but does so through an agent, it is the duty of that agent to furnish satisfactory proofs to the Registration Assessor; first, that the voter is entitled to be registered as such; second, that the certificate of enrollment was duly signed and executed by him; and third, that he had appointed or constituted the person presenting the certificate as his agent.

"It further ruled that it is not the duty of the Registration Assessor to go abroad or visit the voter personally to inquire about these matters or to make a personal investigation of the subject, but that it is the duty of the voter to furnish the necessary proofs and that this was especially true where the agent filed a large number of registration certificates at one time which would require a great deal of time, effort and expense on the part of the Assessor to investigate each one separately.

"This was held to be an unreasonable demand upon the Registration Assessor. The Court, however, indicated that the Assessor must act in good faith and use his best judgment in passing upon such cases.

"After considering the testimony and the argument of counsel, the Court made the following order:

"Respondent's counsel having stated to the Court that the respondent, the Registration Assessor, is satisfied with the proofs offered today of the correctness of the signature of the voter and of the authority of Alfred R. Clees, his agent, to file the same with the Registration Assessor, the Court now grants leave to the respondent Registration Assessor to correct the registration list by enrolling the petitioner, Armondo Mazzone, in the Democratic Party as directed by the certificate of enrollment within two days from this date, whereupon and in such case the petition will be dismissed at the cost of the county exclusive of witness fees."

LEAVES BEQUESTS TO PRIESTS AND CHURCH

Mrs. Rose C. Heath, Newtown, Leaves Estate Valued At $1,000

LETTERS ARE GRANTED

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 14.—Two Catholic priests and St. Andrew's Catholic Church, of Newtown, were remembered in the will of Mrs. Rose C. Heath, who died at her home in Newtown, August 14, leaving an estate of $1,000, according to her will probated in the Register of Wills' office, here, a few days ago.

The First National Bank and Trust Company of Newtown was named the executor.

To the father-in-charge of St. Andrew's parish, she bequeathed the sum of $100 for the saying of masses for the repose of her soul. The Rev. J. T. Brady was bequeathed the sum of $200.

To the sisters at St. Andrew's Convent at Newtown, the testatrix gave $50. Mary Davis was bequeathed $100. A $200 trust fund was created for the upkeep of the burial lot in good condition.

The residue of the estate will be placed in trust and the income will be paid to her husband, Frank B. Heath. Leaving real estate holdings of $2,000, Wilhelmina Rosenberger, of Perkaskie, in her will probated in the Register of Wills office, directed that a son, William B. Rosenberger, who was also named the executor, should receive $100 and a grandson, Harold B. Rosenberger, $25.

The residue of the estate will be distributed between two sons, William and Harvey B. Rosenberger.

Mrs. Rosenberger, who died August 26, lived at 122 South Fourth street, Perkaskie.

The $750 estate, consisting entirely of real estate, of George T. Trimmings, of Yardley, will be inherited by his

TREVOSE FLOWER SHOW ATTRACTING HUNDREDS OF FOLKS

A. W. Moyer, Dublin, Places First in All Classes of One Section

RIBBON AWARDS

Unseasonable Weather, With Cold and Rainy Spells, Did Not Hamper

TREVOSE, Sept. 14.—Unseasonable weather, with periods of cold and torrential rains, did not deter the members and friends of the Trevose Horticultural Society in their preparations for the 13th annual Fall flower show, which opened in the community house yesterday, and which will close this evening.

The number of exhibitors, and entries, were practically the same as in previous shows, and with introduction of new and novel ideas the exhibition was pronounced a splendid success by all who viewed it. The Henry A. Dreer Company, commercial growers, had an attractive garden arrangement on the stage, second floor of the community house, and both floors were filled with blooms in all shades imaginable.

President Garrett V. Clark, of this village, with his society officers and committee members, worked tirelessly for the success of the show, and were well rewarded for their efforts, several hundred gathering to view the exhibits.

In Section E, gladiolus, which was open to all, A. W. Moyer, of Dublin, garnered all honors, placing first in each of the nine groups.

Ribbons were awarded in the various placements, and the winners are here noted in their proper order:

Section A (Commercial Growers)

Display of miniature, pompon or English dahlias: A. W. Moyer, Dublin; Harry C. Engle, Oak Lane; J. V. Hare, Trevose.

Display of begonias: Green Tree Flower Gardens.

Section B, Dahlias (Open to all)

Vase of 10 dahlia blooms of one variety other than cactus, perfection of blooms considered: Harry C. Engle; Harold W. West, Trenton, N. J.

Vase of three dahlia blooms: James J. Desmond, Elkins Park; Harry C. Engle; Harold W. West.

Basket of 12 dahlia blooms, one or more varieties or colors, with other foliage allowed: Harry C. Engle; Charles Randall, Trevose.

Vase of five blooms, cactus or semi-cactus dahlias: Harry C. Engle.

Miniature Dahlias (Pompoms excluded)

Container of not more than 10 blooms of one or more varieties: Harold W. West; J. V. Hare.

Specimen bloom: H. W. West; Mrs. Harry Heller, Trevose; Robert B. McKenney, Newtown.

Pompon Dahlias (Open to all)

Container of pompon dahlias in any one color or shades thereof: H. C. Engle; Robert B. McKenney; H. W. West.

Collection of pompoms in one container: H. C. Engle; A. W. Moyer; H. W. West.

Section C, Dahlias (For amateurs only)

Vase of three dahlia blooms: Edward F. Rook, Southampton; James J. Desmond; H. W. West.

Container of not less than 10 nor more than 15 blooms, arranged for artistic effect by an amateur member of the society: Miss Alice E. Matthews; R. B. McKenney; Mrs. William Hall, Holmesburg.

Vase of five single type dahlias: Miss Caroline Ivins, Bustleton; Mrs. James Ray, Hatboro; H. W. West.

Collection of pompoms in one container: H. W. West; Sidney Tuckey, Bustleton.

Collection of mixtures in one container: R. B. McKenney.

Section D, Asters (Open to all)

Twelve blooms of lavender or blue shades: H. C. Engle; A. W. Moyer.

Twelve blooms in pink or red shades: A. W. Moyer; H. C. Engle.

Twelve blooms of white or mixed colors: Mrs. James A. Dawson, Newtown; H. C. Engle; Ferd. D. Wynkoop, Huntingdon Valley.

NEW DEAL EMPLOYS ARMY

It was disclosed this week that the farmers of the United States are being regimented by a force of 111,500 individuals. These individuals represent the compliance or policing system of the A. A. A. Armed with arbitrary authority delegated to them by the Secretary of Agriculture, under the Agricultural Adjustment Act, these individuals fix the local quotas and allotments. They inspect the local farms, check up on the truth and veracity of individual farmers, and report to the government at Washington what, in their opinion, constitutes violation of A. A. A. contract compliance. When reports are made, the alleged offender is cut off from any further benefits under the A. A. A.

It was disclosed that there are 10,000 individual members of wheat reduction committees, 75,000 members of corn-hog committees, 25,000 members of cotton control committees, and 1,500 members of tobacco control committees.

They are paid on a per diem basis of $3.00 to $4.00 a day, and the money to meet the expenses is deducted from the benefit checks which the government mails to the farmers, and appears in the A. A. A. financial reports under the head of "Local Administrative Expenses."

It was these per diem representatives of the A. A. A. who constituted 90 per cent. of the personnel of the recent so-called "farmers' march" to Washington, to insist that the A. A. A. program be continued on terms demanded by the New Deal. It is these per diem officials who warn farmers to stay away from referendum elections, provided they are not in favor of continuing the A. A. A. program.

CONSTITUTION DAY

Tuesday, September 17, will be Constitution Day. It will mark the 148th anniversary of the day upon which the fundamental law of the United States of America was adopted.

This year's anniversary will be of extraordinary importance, in view of the part the Constitution has played lately in matters affecting the public welfare; the force it has proved to be in protecting the people's interests.

It should be looked upon as an opportunity to clarify any misgivings that may exist concerning it, to emphasize its soundness and value, and to lay the ground work for bolstering its protection from attack.

But the Constitution is a bulwark against autocracy and the ambitions of self-seeking demagogues who would set it aside solely because it has the supreme court to uphold it. The greatest charter of liberty ever written has had no support from many in high places today. Congress has legislated as if the constitution had been scrapped and the vapors of fakirs and economic false prophets had supplanted it.

But, despite wisecracks about "horse - and - buggy - days," the constitution still lives and will continue to safeguard the liberties of the American people for ages after the wisecrackers and their silly experiments have been forgotten.

A sociologist predicts a new age of naivete, comparable to the '90s. Already the four-year-olds who were doing Mae West impressions last season have gone Shirlie Temple.

NEW CROP FOR FARMS

AVON, Colo. — (INS) — Pyrethrum flowers, now imported in large quantities from Japan for the manufacture of insect powder, may become a valuable cash crop for Colorado's mountain farms. Experiments conducted at the state experiment station at Avon, 7,600 feet above sea level, demonstrated that the plant could be raised profitably in this region.

COP NEVER MADE PINCH

BOSTON — (INS) — All cops aren't tough. Joseph S. Snyder just vacated the toughest traffic spot in the city after 14 years duty with the record of never having made a "pinch." In that time it was estimated that 50,000,000 "dumb" and otherwise motorists had passed his post. He believed it much better to talk to them like a "Dutch uncle."

"CAST INTO EDEN"

BY
HENRY C. ROWLAND

CHAPTER XXII

Jerome was a good boat-builder and knew precisely how to go about his job. His material was of the easiest sort to work and his tools good. The chicken house was stripped of alternating planks, which left it standing but freely ventilated. Linda proved an able helper, but the work went slowly. The bench with its wood vise was in the storeroom cellar and the dory being built in the house, fifty yards away. The planks had to be carried back and forth for planing and fitting.

Besides, Jerome was the sort of craftsman for whom it is temperamentally impossible to do a slovenly job. He was no amateur, having grown up longshore and built small craft from boyhood. He was an artist as well as an artisan, and his joiner-work was precise.

Linda helped him in a state of admiration that had a more rapid growth than that of the perfectly well modeled and constructed dory. She had never thought of him as a skilled hand-worker. She had expected some sort of clumsy leaky home-made craft that might hopelessly serve to ferry them over to the mainland with a good deal of baling. She had never counted on anything as trim and tight and shapely as now grew under her eyes.

"I'd never have believed you had it in you, Jerry," she said the second day, after he had cut out and fitted the stem piece and stern transom, and sprung the strips of plank that served as garboard strakes on the mold and nailed them in.

"Most of us have got something in us that it's good for us to get out."

"That's true enough," she agreed, and looked thoughtful.

The gorillas had not annoyed them. They made their usual calls, but did not linger after the accustomed sweets were given them. The Racketeer remained persona non grata. When he appeared on the edge of the jungle Jerome stopped work long enough to hurl something at him, with a few harsh orders to be off. All of the family seemed aware that some serious business was afoot that left no time for social amenities. This was just as well as the apes had shown — like all primitive natures when indulged — a disposition to become over-familiar. Even Papa Gorilla seemed to feel that his rough behavior had cost him a loss of favor, and to accept the situation.

Workers are invariably tendered more respect than idlers. The purposeful endeavor was also good for the morale of Jerome and Linda. It strengthened their self-respect, and that for each other. Their physical conditions improved.

Their early dread of the owner's return diminished in like ratio. After all, they could not be blamed for serving themselves from the resources at hand or for making an efficient effort to leave.

Before the building of the dory began they had been rapidly if unconsciously drifting into a mutual relationship that could only have ended in one way. But now the already occupation acted as a tonic to their morale, lifting them out of the glamor of mere lotus eaters. They were growing more in love with each other as time went on, but this sentiment was acquiring dignity with its strength.

A week of steady painstaking work saw the dory finished. Even Jerome admitted that the job was good. It was then necessary to fashion ears, which he achieved by fitting blades into straight bamboo poles. Thole-pins had been left into the dory's gunwales. Jerome also cut a bamboo mast and a yard on which to bend the big fine grass floor mats as a sail. He gave the dory a coat of paint.

"All we've got to do now is to drag her down to the beach and shove her in," he said. "Then you can keep her off a little while I make a few trips to load stores."

"And get some clothes, if any, out of the chests."

"Yes, I can capsize one or two and saw out the bottoms. That won't mutilate the carving and can be easily repaired."

"Why not do that now, to save time?"

"All right. Then we'll be all set." This was in the middle of the afternoon. They were not tired because too splendidly conditioned, but both felt the relaxation that comes from the satisfactory completion of a sustained and useful effort.

Linda said: "We ought to christen her. Let's have a little party. Just one little drink to celebrate."

"All right," he agreed. "A thought striking her she asked: 'What's happened to the gorilla family? They haven't been round today.'"

"That's so. Maybe they've decided we're fed up with them."

"Hops so. I've had a sneaking fear they might try to interfere with our getaway. Smash the boat, or something."

Jerome said, "They're used to us now and probably think by this time we own the place."

She looked thoughtful. If Jerome had been watching her just then he might have noticed that she glanced furtively at the far end of the plantation. But he had risen. He had forgotten all about the forbidden fruit.

"Suppose you put one, just one bottle of champagne in the spring to cool, Linda. I want to go up on the plateau for a final look-see before breaking into the chests."

"All right. I couldn't bear it if the Duono were to blow in just after we'd helped ourselves to the only thing we didn't have to have."

Jerome picked up an axe that he carried when going any distance from the house premises, on the off chance of trouble with the Racketeer. Such a weapon would have availed him nothing in a clash with Old Man Gorilla, who must have weighed close to five hundred pounds. It would have been like a school-boy attempting to defend himself with a toy hatchet from the attack of an infuriated Zulu warrior. But the Racketeer was a gangling youth of perhaps two hundred pounds weight, and Jerome an athlete who tipped the beam at about twenty pounds less, so that the odds in his favor. Also the Racketeer had shown himself to be mischievous but not murderous.

Jerome went up the ledges and made the round of the plateau far enough to get a view of the sea on all sides. No vessel could have escaped observation unless she were close in to the shore, sheltered from view by the fringe of palms. None of the apes was visible as he passed the ruin, nor did he see any mouflin or other animals, but several brilliant pheasants (Argus, he thought) boomed out of the bush as he pushed through. Also for the first time he found traces of pigs on the edge of the marsh. The island must contain about ten square miles, he surmised, and its varied character would make it a perfect tropical game preserve.

Returning, he came out on the clearing through a grove of oranges in full blossom, yet still bearing some of the ripe fruit. The air was drenched with the sweet perfume. He heard Linda singing from some invisible source not far away. She had a low-pitched throaty voice like unto a cello's. She was crooning: "And the moon comes over the mountain."

Then she came in sight from behind a congaunt bush and Jerome received a fresh shock of the series so far delivered on this enchanted isle. Linda had dressed herself for the party, just as Eve might have. She looked like a very beautiful blonde Polynesian girl bedecked for some gala occasion. Her costume was entirely floral, though the leather surplice showed under the short skirt that she had quickly woven from tendrils of the bougainvillea with bright notes from more brilliant flowers worked in.

She prouetted in front of Jerome. "How do you like my party dress, Jerry? You like it, don't you? Better duck into the pool."

He did so, and emerged refreshed. "You have a bridal look that's not quite in order for a christening," he said.

"Well, a boat christening is sort of a wedding ceremony, Jerry. A marriage with the sea."

"That comes later . . . and plenty of hard work between. Every time I turn my back you slip deeper into the Eve motif. It's high time we got out of here before I flop into the demoralized Adam role."

They went inside. There was a big earthen bowl on the center table and some cups beside it. Linda said: "Drink some of this, Jerry."

He drank thirstily. The day had been more than usually hot and even now with the shadows lengthening the air was heavy. The dory filled half the interior, and Jerome looked at his handiwork moodily.

"This isn't christening the boat, Linda."

"No, let's do that. I'll splash some on her bow . . ." She filled a cup and dashed the contents against the stout stem of the dory. "I christen thee . . . Lilith . . ."

There was a moment of silence. Then Jerome said drily: "Eve would have been quicker to paint."

"Lilith is prettier. How do you like the drink?"

"It's delicious . . . but queer. There's something I don't seem to recognize . . . and that's what gives it such a . . . well, not a kick exactly but a sort of exotic flavor. What is it?"

"So that's it," Jerome said. "We must be careful. There's too much responsibility." He refilled his glass.

Linda waited until he had emptied it. Then she said: "Jerry, there isn't one drop of spirits of any sort in that drink. Not even the champagne. I don't think we'll need it after all. This is better."

He set down his cup. "What's that you were telling me about the forbidden fruit? Linda, is this . . . it?"

"Don't be cross, Jerry. It's quite all right."

"How all right?"

"The fruit dropped . . ."

"What fruit?"

"The Forbidden Fruit . . . I caught it like a football."

"You caught it?"

"I saw what was happening and got underneath. When it fell I caught it in my hands. It was soft but firm. I hurried back to the house. I couldn't wait to taste the fruit. I could feel the juice swishing round inside so I cut it open over this bowl. There was about a quart. It had the most heavenly flavor."

"Then why mix it with anything?"

"I didn't. I knew you'd be cross and wouldn't taste it if I told you."

"I wonder if that's how Eve put it over on Adam," Jerome said curtly.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Posies—to that new accessory color—"cinnamon toast." It's in one of the swankiest houses—in hats of felt, and gloves, belts, shoes and bags of suede. There're even touches of it in their boutonnieres—and it's grand. . . . Another such gem is a glowing radish rust—this in calf—in every accessory imaginable. . . .

Spotted for early Fall—a three-piece knit that's different. The skirt and vestee are jacquard patterned, and the sweater jacket's of plain light rabbit's hair. Smart—and new. . . . Latest for snapping up that black silk dress in neekwear of honey-colored soutache braid. Sparkly but not much so, if you get what we mean, and it comes in a drooping gilet, a cadet collar and a devastating schoolgirl style with, if you want them, cuffs to match. . . .

The town's gone crazy over monograms—so crazy, in fact, that one way of being different is by not having any. There are pins with your initials (or name) cut from wood and esconced thereon. . . . bracelets after the same idea, with the letters strung on leather er things . . . metal sports fobs and pins, with hollow insides for your initials to be clicked into. . . . and button fastenings with similar click-in initials for your flannel robe. There's even a new kind of initial that you press into your linen hankies, sheets and whatnot. And they stay and stay!

LEGAL NOTICE

In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Bucks

In Re: Petition for Change of Polling place of Bristol Borough, Sixth Ward, Second Election Precinct.

ORDER

And now, to wit, September 11, 1935, the petition of the electors of the Second Election Precinct of the Sixth Ward of Bristol Borough having been presented and considered, and it appearing that the polling place for said Election District has recently been demolished so that it is impossible to hold any elections therein and that by reason thereof an emergency exists, therefore, the Court hereby orders and directs that the said polling place for the said election district be changed from its present location to the store building of Charles Karp located at 1834 Farragut Avenue in said election district. Notice of said change of polling place to be given by advertisements in the Bristol Courier at least two times, to wit, on September 12th and September 14th respectively, and by not less than five handbills to be posted at prominent places within said precinct, one of which is to be posted at or near the location of the former polling place, at least three days before election.

By the Court,
(Signed) HIRAM H. KELLER,
President Judge.

AL PITKO WILL PLAY WITH SEEDMEN TODAY

Al Pitko, star centerfielder of the Burlington A. A. club, will play in the outfield for the D. Landreth Seed Company baseball team this afternoon against the Bacharach Giants, of Philadelphia. The game is scheduled to begin at 3.15 o'clock.

Pitko is the heavy-hitting outfielder who made three hits in an exhibition game against the Phillies and has signed a contract to go south with the Athletics next spring. Pitko can also play the infield but Manager Landreth intends to use him in centerfield.

The Landrethmen will be weakened by the absence of Paul Gotwald, Leo Hibbs, Glize Dougherty and Turner Ashby. Gotwald is away, Hibbs will play with Edgely, while the latter two are with Holmesburg. It is most likely that Danny Hines will cavort third base for the Seedmen.

MANY FILE ENTRIES FOR MOTORCYCLE GRIND

From the way the entries are pouring into chairman, "Gene" Shillingford, 1635 Hunting Park avenue, Philadelphia, the 100-mile motorcycle championship race, scheduled for Sunday on the famous speedway track at Langhorne will have 40 of the fastest riders in the world.

The entry of a picked team of hardy riders from Great Britain—Dick Manghin, Reggie Pink and Charles Haberman, gives the race an international flavor and, if the invaders live up to the reputation which has preceded them, the American title is likely to go to King George's Domain.

Another foreign threat will be "Jim" Ferguson from Toronto, who is known as one of the hardest riders in the Dominion.

A number of short track riders who have been doing so well on the Yellowjacket oval will transfer their activities to the mile track at Langhorne and the longer distance, and they will be seen in Sunday's rare if they survive the elimination trials, which will be held on Saturday from one to six o'clock.

Bob Artman of Oklahoma City, "Dutch" Schantz of New York, "Mutt" Kelly from Portland, Ore., Jesse James, straightaway title holder for a mile, Walt Schaeffer, Philadelphia short track champion, Joe and Carmen Plandra, all well known to patrons of the Frankford oval, have entered.

The championship race, which is sponsored by the Middle Atlantic Motorcycle Dealers Association and sanctioned by the American Motorcycle Association, will get underway at 2.30 and will be preceded by a consolation race open to the riders who fail to qualify in the time trials.

ANNUAL RED AND GRAY GAME THIS AFTERNOON

(By Jack Orr)

The annual red and gray game, the choice spot of Bristol High's preliminary practice, is to be held today on the high school field. Forty-eight boys will see action in today's fray and each of them will play one-half or 30 minutes.

This match is the rubber game, as in 1933 the Gray eleven was victorious by the count of 7-6, while last year the Red team came out on top, scoring six points to their opponents' nothing.

Captain "Flute" Schiffer of the Red club is confident of a victory, while Harry Hinman, leader of the Gray side also is sure of coming out on top. Both teams are evenly matched and the outcome should be an interesting one.

The starting lineup will play for the first period, then they will be replaced by their substitutes. The same procedure will be followed in the last half. Opening kickoff, 1.30 sharp.

| Red | position | Gray |
| Messinelli | left end | Bragg |
| Gullato | left tackle | Moran |
| Shiffer (capt.) | left guard | Hinman (capt.) |
| F. Mignoni | center | Fry |
| Profy | right guard | Stallone |
| C. Mignoni | right tackle | VanZant |
| McCahan | right end | McGinley |
| Baurath | quarter back | Sagolla |
| Evans | left half back | Zefferi |
| Orazi | right half back | Zefferi |
| DiMidio | fullback | Conti |

Substitutions: Red—ends, Snyder, DeLuca and Carnvale; tackles, O'Boyle and Abbott; guards, A. Profy and Chillelo; center, Tunis; backs, Phillips, Collier, Van Lenten, Sans and W. Johnson. Gray—ends, Louder and White; tackles, Finelli, Fisher and Di Palma; guards, Bramble and Hatcher; center, Capicciotti; backs, Tomlinson, Hoffman, Wollard, Palumbo and H. Johnson.

Referee, Bormice; umpire, Orazi; head linesman, Tomlinson; field judge, Dougherty.

Periods: 15 minutes.

Kickoff: 1.30.

Dark Dynamiter Loaded for Baer

By BURNLEY

Joe Louis, the prizefighter, is going through the motions of training for his crucial battle with Max Baer.

Sphinx-like as ever, the ebony-hued iceberg of the ring, Joe Louis, is going through the motions of training for his crucial battle with Max Baer with the same deadly diffidence he always shows whether his opponent is Primo Carnera or Canevasback Cohen.

To the Dark Angel of Detroit, Baer is just another guy to be ironed out, and he actually figures that Wacky Maxie will be much easier for him than the ponderous Carnera was.

It is Joe's idea—and it seems reasonable enough—that the wide-open Baer will present a much more inviting target for his lethal larrups than was offered by the giant Italian, who, it must be remembered, has a pretty fair left jab, whereas Baer is strictly a swinger and, on paper, seems made to order for the Brown Bomber.

Louis, always coming in, lights from a semi-crouch, with his chin well covered, while the surest way to get nailed by one of Duffy Max's long right hands is to move BACK from it.

That was the mistake Carnera made in the first round of his scrap with Baer—he pulled his head right back into the arc of Baer's looping swing in spite of the fact that Bill Duffy had instructed him to get inside of those rights that Max brings up from the floor.

Baer's alleged ability to take it also fails to impress the emotionless Detroit sharpshooter, who insists that he can knock out any man that he can hit. This Louis is no fool—if he finds that the Baer chin offers undue resistance to his sleep prodigious, he will go to work on Max's pantry, which will not be so pleasant for the big bad Baer.

Max's only chance is to nail Louis with a lucky punch early in the fray, for by no stretch of the imagination can one picture Baer outboxing such a master technician as the Detroit Devastator. It looks like all Joe from here, boys and girls.

CASEYS TO GO AFTER CUBANS FOR REVENGE

Undismayed at their two defeats in the Bristol Twilight League play-off series, the Caseys will be after the third game in a strong manner tomorrow. A victory for the Cubans will clinch the pennant for them and crown them 1935 champions.

Manager Eddie McDevitt may shake up the Caseys' line-up tomorrow. The only players certain of their positions are Paul Moore, Jimmy Cooper and Joe Dougherty. Moore is the left fielder and lead-off hitter who got on base four times last week. Cooper is playing steady ball at third and Dougherty's hat has been a potent factor in the driving in of the Knights' runs.

Both games dropped by the McDevittmen have been lost in the closing innings of the games. Last week until the seventh innings. However did not allow a runner to reach second base but then his mates blew up behind him to allow the colored boys to score six runs in three innings and capture the contest.

Manager Frank Washington is uncertain who will toss them up in the third game but most likely it will be "Eddie" Thompson who won the first game after relieving Johnny Braggs in the third inning. The remainder of the colored team's line-up will be the same.

Game will begin at 2.30 sharp.

BASEBALL

Schedule for today—BACHARACH GIANTS at LANDRETH SEEDS. Schedule for tomorrow—CASEYS and CUBANS (Leedom's) HULMEVILLE at DOLINGTON.

Funeral of Brook Street Resident Largely Attended

The Rev. Father Thomas Rocca de la Salle conducted the funeral service for the late Mrs. Mary Christina Pietropolo at St. Ann's R. C. Church this morning. A large company of relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony, and the interment in St. Mark's Cemetery under the direction of Galzerano.

The deceased, widow of Clemente Pietropolo, died at her residence, 322 Brook street, Tuesday.

SALES FOR FLORIDA

Miss Mary Moag, of Parkland, sailed from Baltimore today on the S. S. Dorchester of the Merchants & Miners Line, en route to Jacksonville and Miami, Florida.

READY TO SEEK HIS FOURTH MITT VICTORY

Al Paris, fast-stepping St. Ann's batter, will seek his fourth straight victory in the amateur boxing show to be conducted here Monday night in the St. Ann's outdoor arena. It will be the fourth show held under the sanction of the A. A. U.

Two more local boys went into training last night, bringing the total to seventeen. Ten will be used in the next bouts while the hold-overs may get a chance in future bouts. Last night the three boxers from Holmesburg joined the A. A. U. and expressed their desire to participate in Monday night's bouts. One of the youths is "Vic" Christy, 198 pounder, who is the backfield ace of the Holmesburg Vagabonds.

The reserved tickets went on sale yesterday afternoon and within the course of four hours all but one hundred had been sold. The grandstand seats will not go on sale until seven o'clock the night of the fight. All indications point to a complete sell-out of all seats.
